Wednesday that the Public Procurement Regulatory Authority (PPRA) rules had made third-party validation mandatory for procurements exceeding Rs500 million, while an external validation committee would be constituted for purchases worth more than Rs2 billion to ensure transparency and prevent irregularities.

The committee presided by the acting convener Moin Aamir Pirzada, was briefed that the process of revising the PPRA rules had started two years ago and the notification of the new rules was issued in September 2026. Under the revised rules, all government procurements would be conducted through the Electronic Pakistan Acquisition and Disposal System (EPADS), while the bidding process had every ministry and division to strengthen oversight of government purchases.

He said that in the past, PPRA rules were bypassed in the name of national interest and contracts were awarded to preferred bidders. However, the revised rules had tightened the system to prevent such practices.

The PAC also examined the audit report of the Ministry of Information Technology for 2024-25 and questioned the ministry over obtaining a supplementary grant of Rs21 billion during the financial year 2023-24. The committee convener sought an explanation for the substantial supplementary grant, to which the Special Secretary IT said that Rs11 billion out of the total amount represented operational expenses. As the ministry failed to provide a satisfactory explanation, the PAC deferred the audit objection.

The committee also took up the delay in completion of the IT Park project in Karachi. The Special Secretary IT informed the committee that the project was being financed by the Korean Exim Bank, which had made it conditional for the contract to be awarded to a Korean contractor. He said that despite two attempts, no Korean contractor had submitted a bid for the project. The ministry would now visit South Korea for a third attempt to invite bids. The committee was further informed that a loan of Rs70 billion would be obtained for the Karachi IT Park project.
